

Odd

Socks

A story about difference and diversity.

My little sister has two odd socks

She wears them walking down the street...

..and she wears them walking around at home!

Sometimes they make her walk a little funny.

Move out my way!

Sometimes her socks make her say funny things.

Sometimes people laugh at my sister and her odd socks

They don't understand her or the things she says

Odd socks?
How ridiculous!

How absurd!

People laugh at me too, saying, "there goes odd sock's brother!"

A person wearing a blue long-sleeved shirt with large, irregular holes in the sleeves, sitting at a table. The text is overlaid on this image.

One day I came home
and tore up all my sister's odd socks.

Mum cried.

"What have you done to your sister's socks?" she said

But at that moment
my sister came in.

She looked at the torn up socks. She looked at my mum crying.

She looked at me.

She didn't say anything.

She just gave me a great big hug.

Then she said, in a quiet voice

I don't mind.

My sister still wears odd socks at school.

She still wears them walking down the street.

And sometimes, kids at school still point and laugh at me, saying "there goes odd sock's brother!"

But you know what? I don't mind. They don't know what it's like having a sister with odd socks.

It's wonderful.
